

FOX!

WRITTEN BY
BEL RICHARDSON

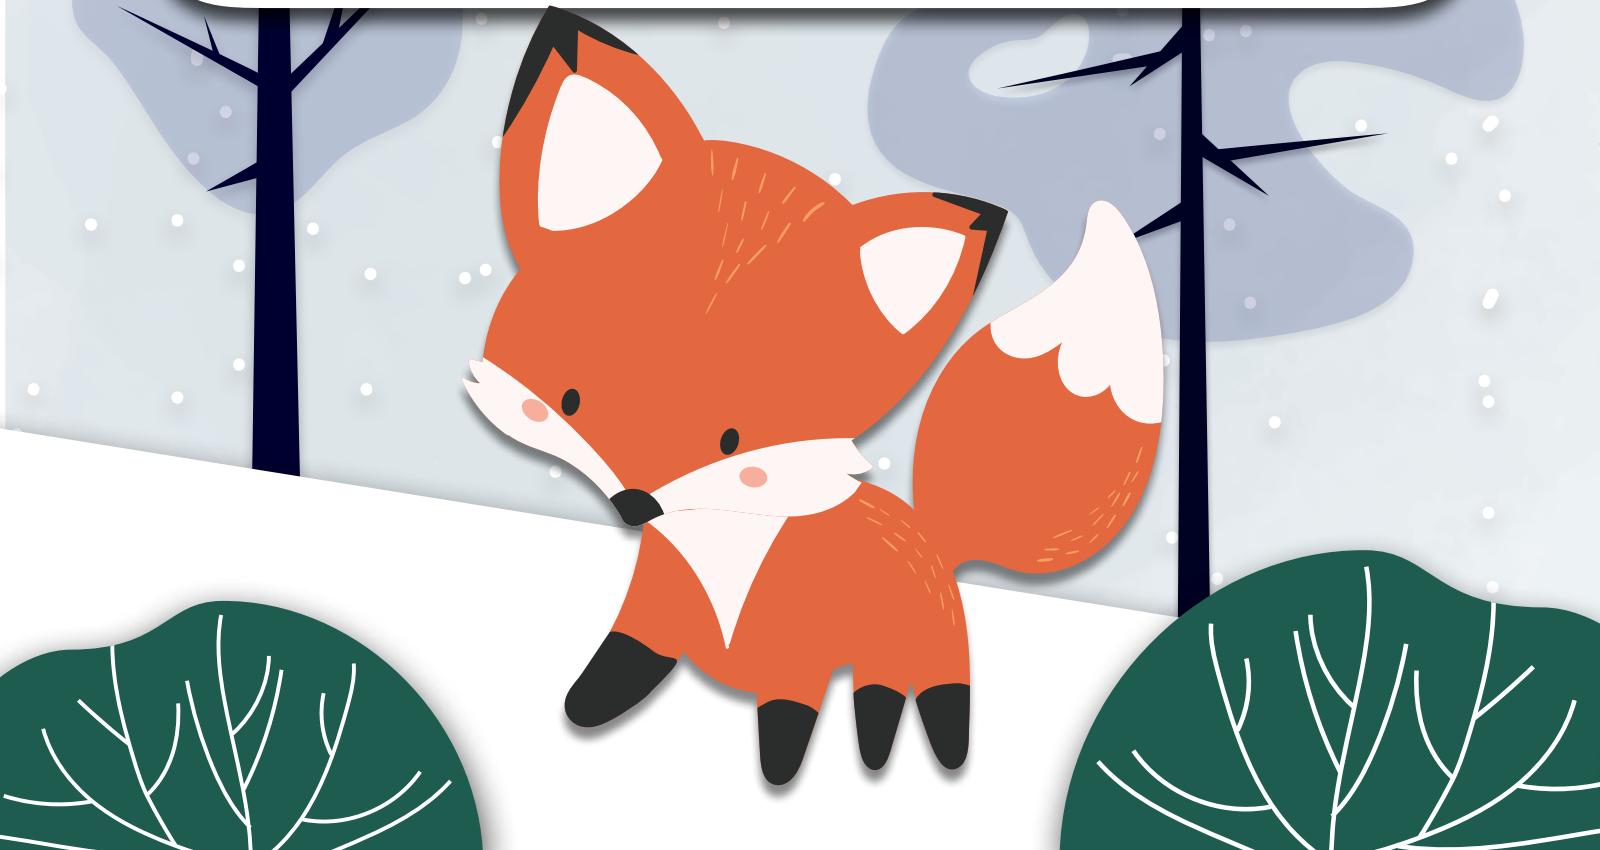

A fox in the forest! It stands
by mossy rocks and fronds,
on the lookout for a meal.

A fox exploring away from the forest. It has found a little fox box to keep it safe and dry.

A fox in the snow, snug in its winter coat. Paw prints in the fresh powder.

A fox can have a different coat, size, and markings to its fellows. Bat-eared foxes are small and black.

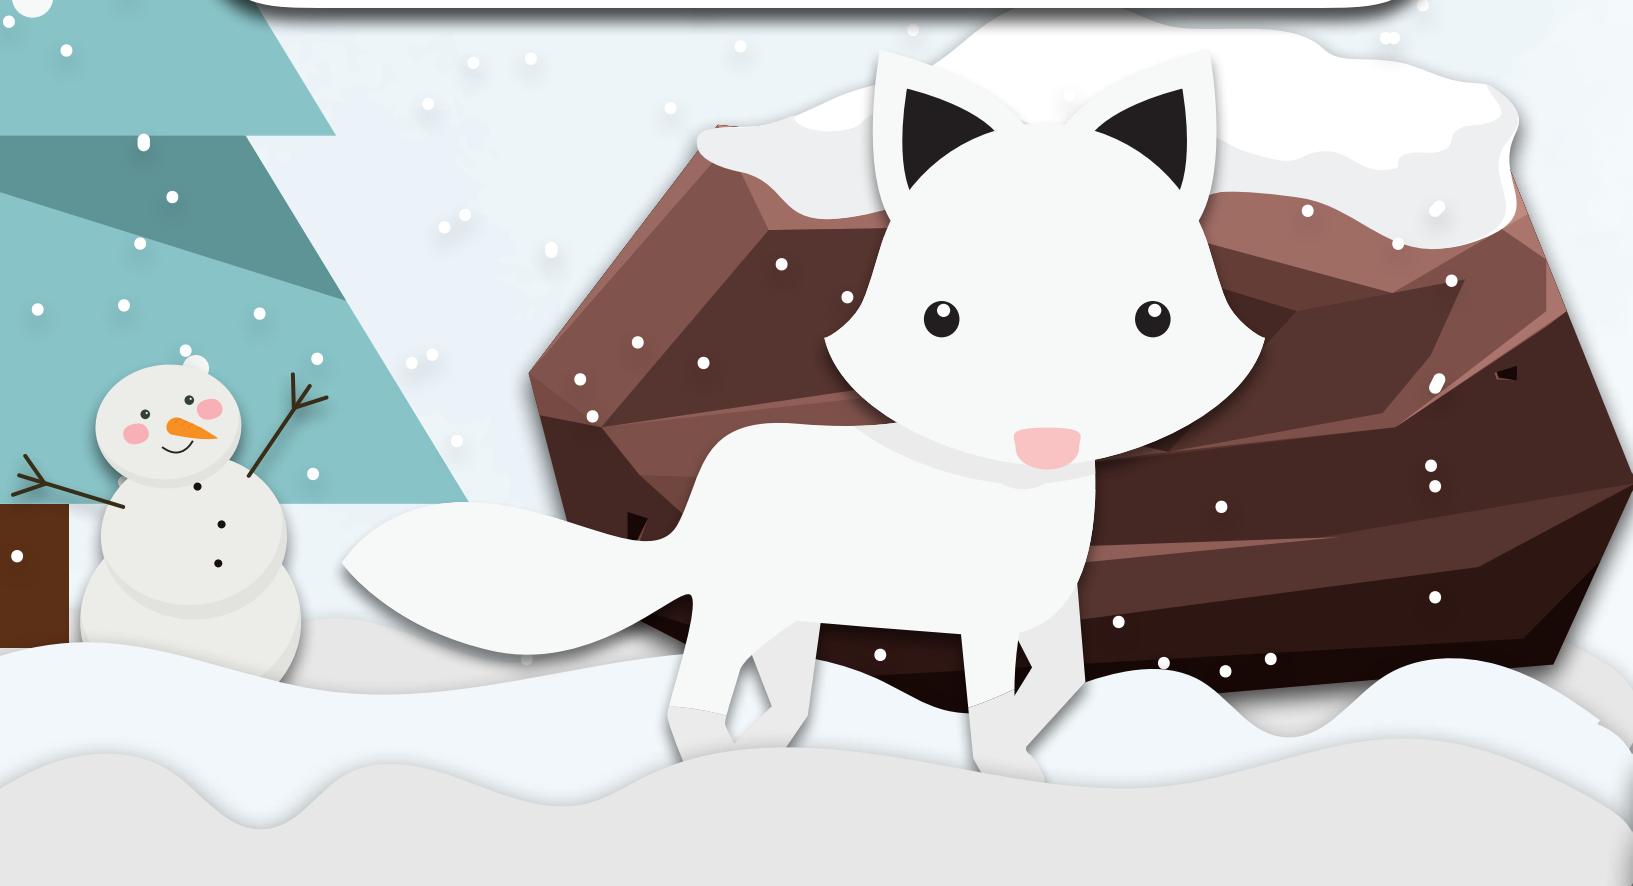

Here is a fennec fox.

A fennec fox is very small with big ears for keeping lookout.

Now we have an arctic fox. Its thick coat is perfect for the snow.

A fox will shed its winter coat for the spring and summer. Can you see how the fur is different?

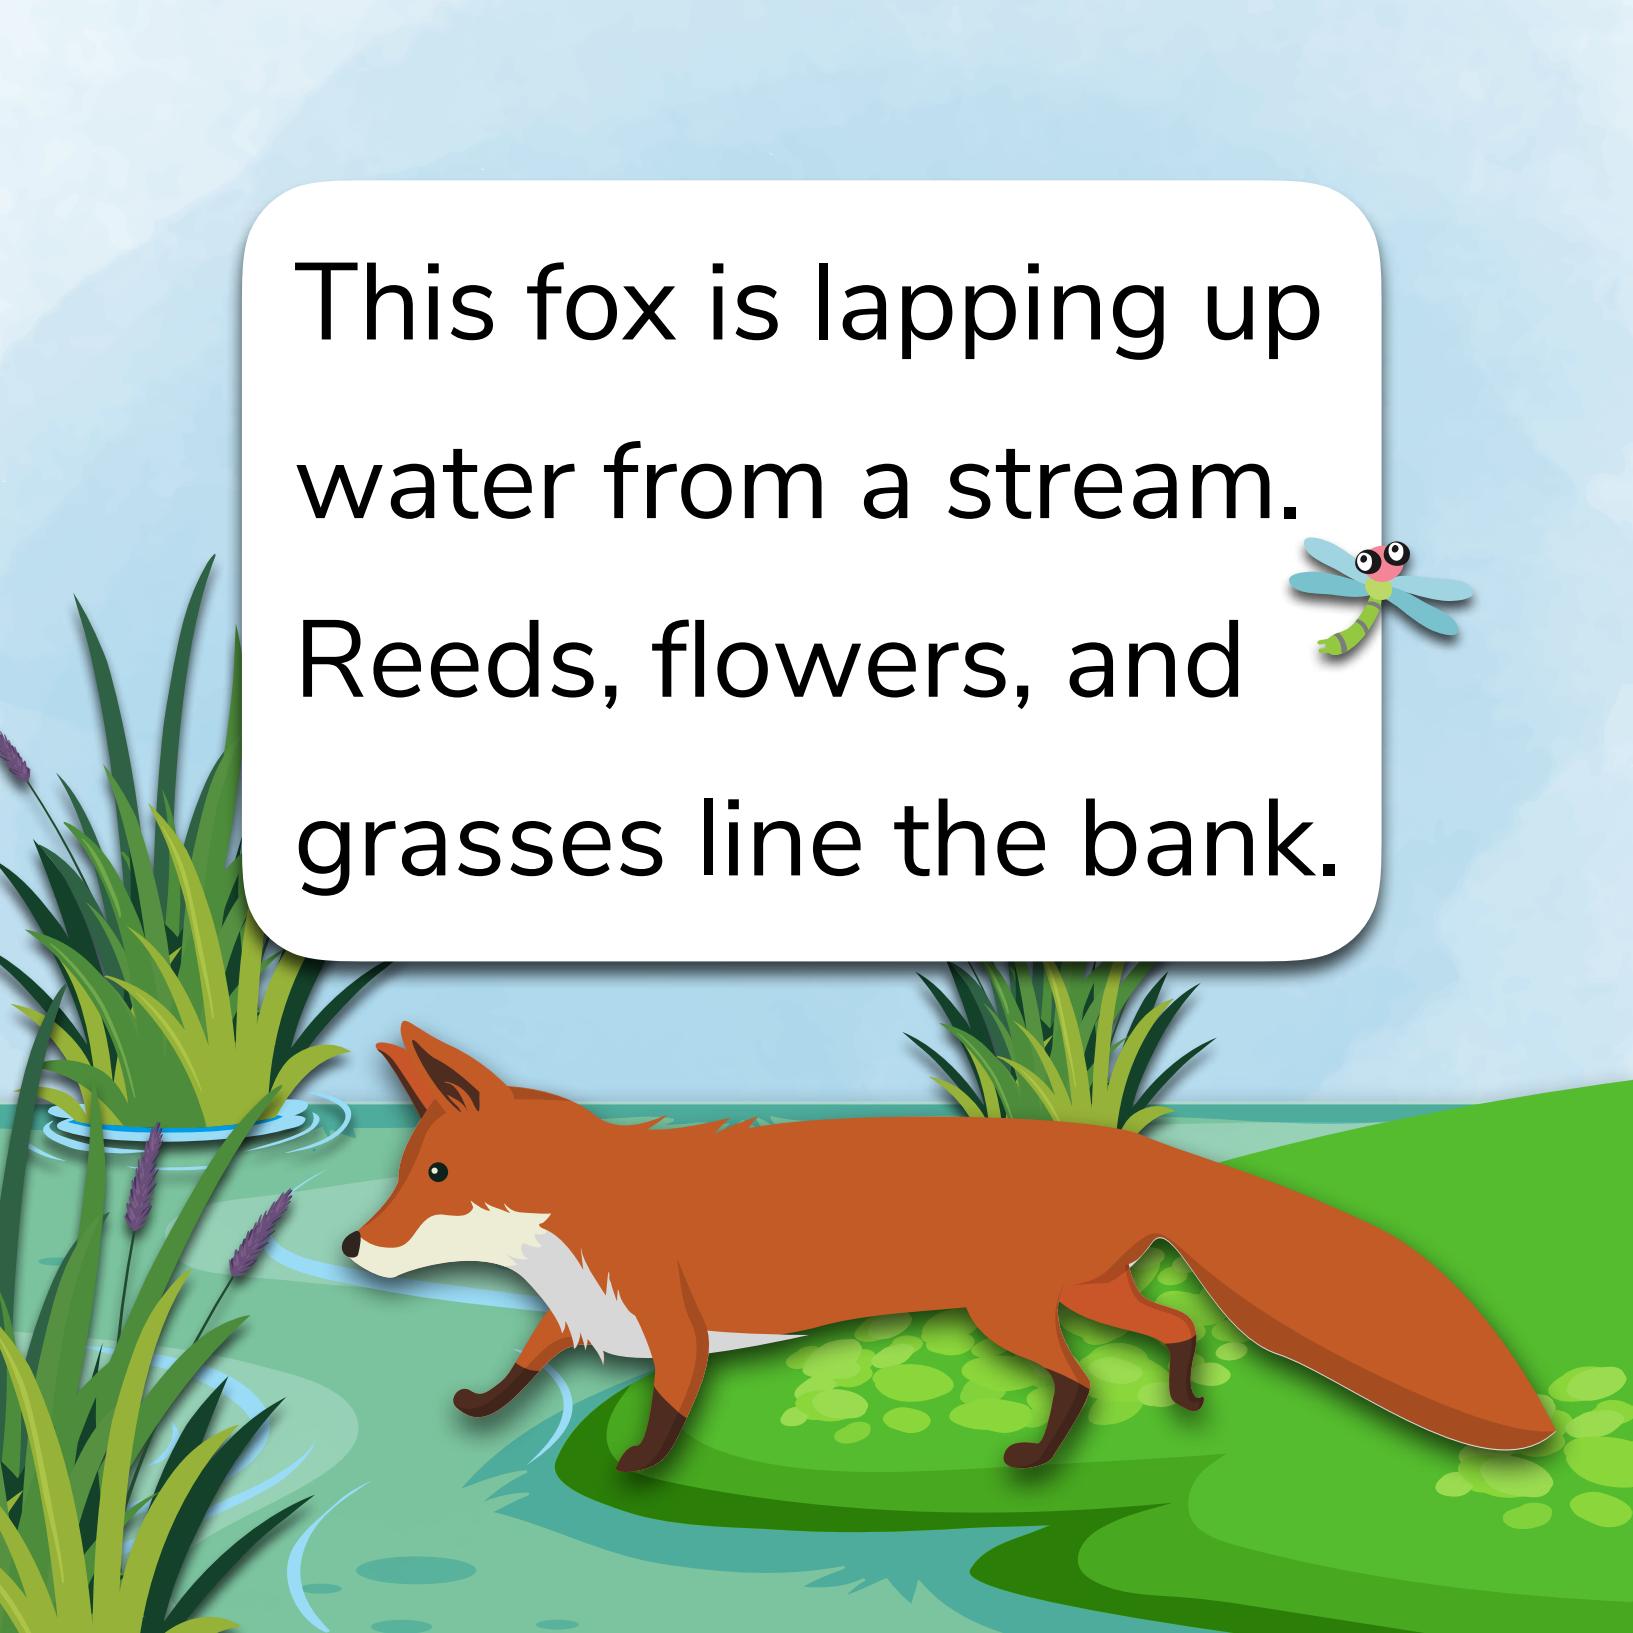

A fox can play-fight. A fox can growl. A fox will defend its meal. A fox is a lot like a dog.

Growl!!

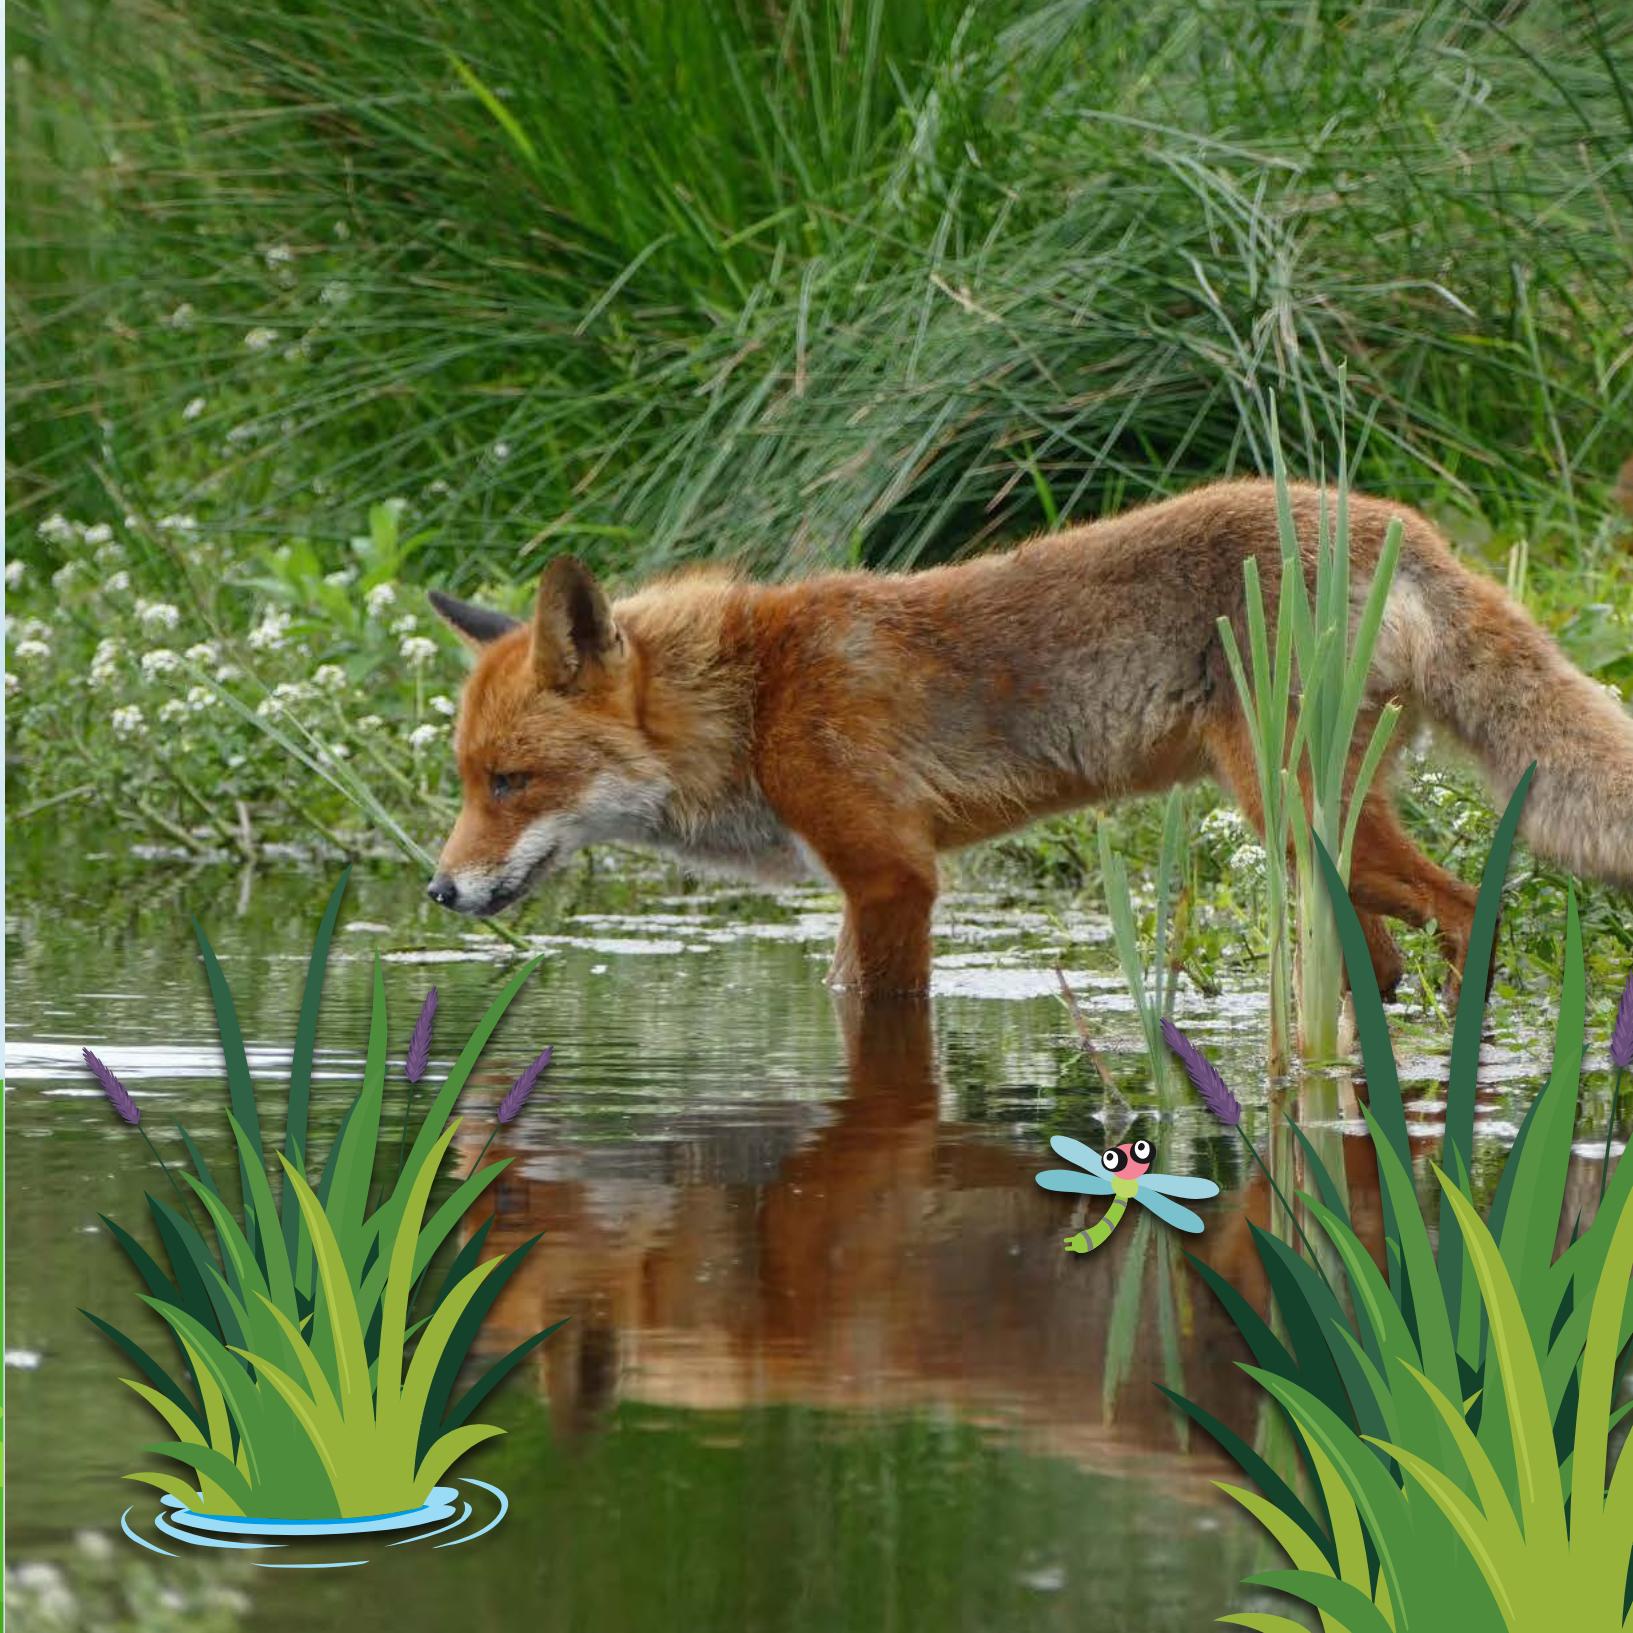

Growl!!

This fox is lapping up
water from a stream.

Reeds, flowers, and
grasses line the bank.

Just about all habitats are good for a fox. They have adapted well to towns and humans.

A fox is good at seeking out a spot for a quick nap.
It looks like it is smiling.

A baby fox is called a kit.
This kit has a lot to learn about being a fox, but foxes are quick learners.
